

Wood as carbon neutral feedstock offers multiple possibilities of future value creation other than established businesses like pulp, paper or construction. UPM has launched a series of innovative projects to develop and implement processes aiming to capture the value of products on a molecular level like biofuels and biochemicals. Focus of the presentation will be the introduction of the biochemicals initiative targeting to produce wood-based bio-monoethylene glycol in a first-of-its-kind facility.